

DuPage Water Commission Attends Argonne National Laboratory for Earth Day

Date: April 23rd, 2009

On Wednesday, April 22nd, 2009, DuPage Water Commission employees Jenessa Nesbitt and Carolyn Johnson were in attendance at Argonne National Laboratory for Earth Day. The display from the Commission as well as other Earth-friendly displays was set up on the way into the lunch area so the Argonne employees could peruse through them on the way to lunch. A variety of flyers educating the employees on how to better use water so it is not wasted were handed out.

Around 200 employees passed by our booth. Questions were answered about what the Commission would be doing in the future to help preserve Lake Michigan's water. The four programs (Water Pledge Program, Residential Leak Detection and Repair Program, Rain Gauge and Landscape Irrigation Program, and Rain Barrel Program) were explained and described to employees that were curious.
